SLANDER ACKNOWLEDGED.

We have not read General Sherman's book, and have no idea that we ever shall, but occasionally we read newspaper extracts from it, that do not tend to heighten our ideas of that Commander's fitness to write history, whatever may be his capacity as a soldier. We cite an instance. In his account of the burning of Columbia, he says:

"Many of the people thought that this fire was deliberately planned and executed. This is not true. It was accidental, and, in my judgment, began with the cotton which Gen.
Hampton's men had set fire to on leaving the city (whether by his orders or not is not matter), which fire was partially subdued early in the day by our men, but when night came on the high wind fanned it again into full blaze, carried it against the frame houses, which caught like tinder, and soon spread beyond control. * In my official report of this conflagration I distinctly charged it to General Wade Hampton, and confess I did it to pointedly to shake the faith of his people in him, for he was, in my opinion, a braggart, and professed to be the special champion of South Carolina."

Now, what a confession we have here from the General of the Army! He not only retracts the slander he once perpetrated on Gen.
Hampton—which would be mainly under other circumstances—but he acknowledges that he was influenced by a base motive in using it at first! Sherman acknowledges that in his official report of the conflagration, he distinctly charged it to Hampton; but now confesses that he did so pointedly—not in the interests of truth, or because he believed it, but for the single reason that he desired "to shake the faith of his people in him!" And what a reason! But here it is, confessed, that Gen. Sherman lied before the whole world at that time simply to injure Wade Hampton in the estimation of his own people, and at this day takes occasion, over his own signature, to publish himself to the world as a liar and a de-tainer! Was that even a good military reason, although in perfect accord, it would seem, with the tactics of the man whose march to the sea, through burning plantation houses, Gen.
Hooker says, will yet be condemned by the Northern people, as it is everywhere else in the civilized world? "Wade Hampton bore a great historic name. His grandfather, of the same name, was a revolutionary officer. His father, Wade Hampton, was an officer in the last war with Great Britain; so that his father and grandfather, native Carolinians, had alike fought with the North, against the Power from whom our independence and freedom were wrested. He inherited the soldierly qualities of his ancestors, and fought, as he believed, for the same principles—the right of self-government and the sovereignty of the States—for which they struggled against the British monarchy. Hewas beloved, honored, and trusted by his people, and because he was, his adversary admits that he "distinctly" and purposely propagated this slander, to induce those people to withdraw their confidence from as mainly a man and as chivalric a soldier as ever fought for a cause that he believed to be right! Alas! for the General of our Army—for we have but one army now—to make such a confession before the world! We have always been taught to believe that "conduct unbecoming a gentleman" was peculiarly flagrant and despicable in an officer, since those two words, "officer and gentleman," are regarded in military ethics as being synonymous. Could any gentleman utter a falsehood "distinctly" about another and not be deemed guilty of flagrant misconduct? We pass by the insult he offers to a vanquished foe, whom he calls a braggart; for all who know Wade Hampton will concede that he is quite as far removed from the character of a braggart as the man who has arrayed half the general officers of the Union army in opposition to the high pretensions he has set up, and the studious effort to belittle others who feel that the "conduct unbecoming a gentleman" is a
"distinctly" about another and not be deemed

CALIFORNIA ROSES.—Santa Barbara now puts in a plea for the largest rose. Less than a year ago Dr. L. Dimmick placed in his grounds a rose plant, the King of Noisettes, Marechal Niel. This has extended over a trellis arching one of his garden walks. Within the last six days a shoot, some three feet in length, has grown from the foot of this trellis. On this stalk, surrounded by half a dozen vigorous buds, hangs to-day the champion rose of the world in size and perfection. The Marechal Niel is a cupped variety of rose, having a lemon tint and with a delicate and delightful perfume. This rose is 16½ inches in circumfer-ence, its shortest diameter five inches, and the measurement in various directions from tip to tip of petals is over six inches. The depth of the rose is fully three inches. This, it is claimed, is the largest rose on record. Another marvelous thing noted before leaving the grounds of Dr. Dimmick was one hundred and thirteen buds on a rose truss of the Le Marque variety. A common feat that covered the space in which were counted the above number of buds.

The Empress Josephine was very fond of perfumes, and above all musk. Her dressing room at Malmaison was filled with it in spite of Napoleon's frequent remonstrance. Many years have elapsed since her death, and the present owner of Malmaison has had the walls of that dressing room repeatedly washed and painted, but neither scrubbing, nor aquafortis, nor paint has been sufficient to remove the smell of the good Empress' musk, which continues as strong as if the bottle which contained it had been but yesterday removed.

Gramham bread is said to be excellent food for the children on account of its superior bone-giving qualities. You can feed a child on that bread until he is all bones.
